

Members of the 167th Alabama Infantry Regiment who made the supreme sacrifice in France and are buried in American Battle Monuments Commission Cemeteries on French soil¹

The soldiers of the 167th Alabama Infantry Regiment who died on the battlefields of France where often, at first, buried where they fell with an identification tag that allowed for their body to be later transported to a site near the battlefield where they could find a permanent resting place or from where their body could be repatriated to the United States depending of the decision of their next of kin. Eight such cemeteries were established after World War One, six in France, one in England and one in Belgium. All have a non sectarian chapel built on the site. Today they hold the bodies of over 30,000 US soldiers who died in combat or from wounds. In each of these cemeteries are graves of the soldiers or a wall of the missing, and the sites are beautifully maintained by the American Battle Monuments Commission (ABMC).

The American Battle Monuments Commission was established in 1923 by an act of Congress at the request of General John Pershing to commemorate the service, achievements and sacrifice of US Armed Forces since they served overseas in 1917. Since 1934, it is responsible for the eight cemeteries and eight memorials or markers commemorating WWI, and for cemeteries and memorials from subsequent wars. An excellent database allows families to look for their relatives (www.abmc.gov).

In 1930 the War Department of the United States, having compiled a list of mothers and widows of deceased soldiers, sailors and marines killed in World War I, offered to sent them to visit the resting places of their loved ones. Many of those entitled to do the pilgrimage choose to do so.²

The state of Alabama also honored its dead of WWI by the construction of the World War Memorial Building where the Alabama Archives are housed and which was built to commemorate the sacrifice of its citizen in the Great War. There is housed the Gold Star collection (<http://www.archives.alabama.gov/goldstar/info.html>), a collection of memories from WWI soldiers donated by their families to the Archives retracing the lives of those men who served in the American Expeditionary Forces (AEF) and died in service of their country.

280³ soldiers of the 167th Alabama Infantry Regiment are buried on French soil and we wish to honor them by listing them below:
